NEWS FLASHES.

The Duke of Edinburgh and Australian Premier, Mr. Menzies, also the Prime Minister of New Zealand, Mr. Walter Nash, met the South African Cricketers at a luncheon. It was held by the Lord Taverners at the Express Club. Jack McGlew and his team are perhaps the strongest Test eleven in the world today, brilliant in batting, bowling, and fielding. There ought to be some great matches. The tourists are cricketers, not politicians, and it's expected that they'll be sportingly welcomed everywhere.

Welcomed to Ashridge Farm (Chesman - home of Anselm Bevan) were Mr. Nehru and his sister, Mrs. Pandit. It was a meeting of old friends. Nye is recuperating in the country after his operation. With his wife, Jennie Lee, is warmly greeted his famous visitors. Nye still has to take life very quietly, so no filming could be allowed in the house.

The Bevans greatly appreciated the visit. Mr. Nehru is in England to attend the Commonwealth Premiers' Conference, but he and Mrs. Pandit found time to motor to Chesman to see two people for whom they have long had an affection.

"Peace with Algeria, but without violence". That is the aim of the French 'No Violence' Movement. 500 of them staged a lie-down demonstration in the suburb of Vincennes. They didn't even resist when gendarmes (also pledged for one day to No Violence) dragged them away. A bit rough on the seat of their pants or skirts, but that's nothing to idealists.

The Black Maria was quickly full. "Come back soon, driver, and there'll be another load for you".
