

THE ROYAL WEDDING.

Upon Westminster Abbey centred the thoughts of all Britain and millions beyond the seas. A Princess of unique personality gay, intelligent, compellingly human, was marrying the man of her own choice. At least 5,000 people camped all night in the Mall.

Already in their places in the historic Abbey (which was begun by Edward the Confessor nearly 900 years ago, were about 2,000 fortunate people. They included, as the Commonwealth Conference is being held, the Australian Premier, Robert Menzies, Dr. Nkrumah and Mr. Diefenbaker. Meanwhile, from Clarence House Princess Margaret rode in the Glass Coach, always used at Royal Weddings, on her way to the Abbey. She was accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh, by whom she was to be given away.

The Groom and Best Man came towards their places. Already in hers was the Countess of Rosse, Mr. Armstrong-Jones's mother. The Best Man was Dr. Roger Gilliatt.

The Groom's father, second from right. Along the nave now came the procession of the Queen and Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother. The Prince of Wales, to the general surprise, wore a kilt.

The moment for which thousands outside the Abbey had waited several hours, had now arrived. To the West Door came the Glass Coach, bearing Her Royal Highness, the Bride. People near, had their first glimpse of the Wedding Gown. It was, perhaps, surprisingly in its simplicity. Of white silk Organza, its classical design is expected to be very much the fashion among brides this year.

This was a tense moment for the Queen, Queen Mother and Bridegroom.

All who were privileged to be in the Abbey remarked the quite astonishing beauty of the Princess, radiant in her happiness as never before.

The Archbishop of Canterbury waited to receive the Bride and Groom as they approached the faldstools.

They were now married, and made their way to the Chapel, to sign the registers.

over/-

-2-

The Bride and Bridegroom now re-appeared before the vast congregation.

The 50 minutes magical solemnity of the Marriage Service was over. By the West Door the Princess and her husband emerged into the outer world (which they would now walk together) joined in Holy Matrimony. Then the waiting thousands really let themselves go. At last they saw Princess Margaret as a wife.

Once more the Glass Coach crossed Horse Guards Parade, not this time to return to Clarence House but to make its way, by the route so often traversed by the Princess on other famous occasions, to Buckingham Palace.

Perhaps never has even the Mall presented a nobler sight than on this morning, made glorious by Royal romance and heavenly weather.

Few people among the cheering thousands gathered round the Palace, could have expected at the beginning of the year that they would this day thrill to the spectacle of Princess Margaret's bridal procession. She and her husband entered the home to which Her Royal Highness first came at the age of six.

What a tremendous morning this had been for the little Bridesmaids. For the entire Royal Family this was a day of joy they will never forget. Outside fully 150,000 people, with unbounded enthusiasm, acclaimed Princess Margaret and her husband when they appeared on the balcony.

Small wonder that the enormous crowd could not be restrained by the police.

At Tower Bridge lay the Royal Yacht, Britannia. Leaving the Palace the Princess and her husband drove on their way to embark. This was the beginning of surely the most romantic honeymoon of our time. Neither the people nor the families of the newly wedded couple will see them for a few weeks. What a send off they had now.

That they were late, arriving at the Pool of London, owing to a traffic jam, slightly upset the time-table, but they were here at last. After saying the last goodbyes of all they boarded the Barge, waiting to convey them to Britannia.

Princess Margaret and Mr. Armstrong-Jones began their voyage to the Carribean at the famous starting place of innumerable voyages from the Port of London. It was the perfect beginning of a honeymoon as they were welcomed aboard. And, that the honeymoon itself will be perfect, is the wish of the whole nation.

-3-

This day the radiant Princess we all love became a wife and endeared herself still further to us all. To her and to her husband we wish all possible happiness.

60-38 2-27101

SECTION ONE/PAGE ONE

PLACE OF EVENT

UP
Westminster Abbey centred the thoughts of all Britain and millions beyond the seas. A Princess of unique personality - gay, intelligent, compellingly human - was marrying the man of her ~~own~~ choice. At least 5,000 people camped all night in The Mall. Now multitudes lined the Wedding Route.

UP

Can't you read?

UP

After a night on a hard pavement, stoke-up well, relax and you're in perfect shape to savour the pageantry to come.

UP

Already in their places in the historic Abbey, which was begun ~~Ed~~ by Edward the Confessor nearly 900 years ago, were about 2,000 fortunate people.

They included, as the Commonwealth Conference is being held,
the Australian Premier, Robert Menzies, Dr. Nkruma of Ghana, and Mr. Diefenbaker, Prime Minister of Canada.

Meanwhile, from Clarence House Princess Margaret rode in the Glass Coach, always used at Royal Weddings, on her way to the Abbey. She was accompanied by the Duke of Edinburgh, by whom she was to be given away. The route lay

AMOUNT

83 83

109

120

134

149

164

184

RELEASED

19

CONTENTS OF PATHFINDER NEWS No.

(Room)
Cutting

PA

(Abbr.)
Abbreviated
(p) (p) (p)

TOTAL

2-27-1901

PLACE OF EVENT

1/2

over Horse Guards Parade

UP

195

~~Mr. Antony Armstrong-Jones, the young man who high riding and the bridegroom~~

195

205

The groom and Best Man came towards their places. Already in hers was Mr. Armstrong-Jones's mother, the Countess Rosse.
The Best Man was Dr. Roger Gilliatt.

UP

214

229
24

The Groom's father, second from right. Along the nave now came the procession of the Queen and Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother. The Prince of Wales, to the <sup>general</sup> surprise, ~~and the~~ ~~congregation~~ wore a kilt.

UP

245

258

The moment for which thousands outside the Abbey had waited several hours had now arrived. To the West Door came the Glass Coach, bearing Her Royal Highness, the Bride. People near had their first glimpse of the Wedding Gown. It was, perhaps, surprising in its simplicity. Of white silk organza, its classical design is expected to be very much the fashion among brides this year.

UP

LENGTH
Title Subject

⑥

AMOUNT

19

CONTENTS OF THE CONTENTS NO.

RELEASED

(Room) (Curtain) BY

(Abbreviated) (payments) TO 28F190

SECTION 2.

PLACE OF EVENT

23

The 50 minutes magical solemnity of the Marriage Service was over. By the West Door the Princess and her husband emerged into the outer world which they would now walk together, joined in Holy Matrimony, as ~~man and wife~~.

43

To the little Bridesmaids there was an affectionate wave, and ~~then~~ the Glass Coach set out for the Palace.

Then the waiting thousands really let themselves go.

63

At last they saw Princess Margaret as a wife.

UP

80

Once more the Glass Coach crossed Horse Guards Parade, not this time to return to Clarence House but to make its way, by the route so often traversed by the Princess on other famous occasions, to Buckingham Palace.

100

UP

110

Perhaps never has even The Mall presented a nobler sight than on this morning, made glorious by Royal romance

125 and heavenly weather.

UP

153

For people, among the cheering thousands gathered round the Palace, could have expected at the beginning of the year that they would this day thrill to the spectacle of Princess Margaret's bridal procession. She and her husband entered the

VEHICLE

CARRIER/VAN

CUTTER

TRUCK

LENGTHS

Title

Subject

AMOUNT

Room (Curtain)

BY

Approved (Signature)

TOTALS:

CONTENTS OF THE NEWS P.

RELEASED

125

175

SECTION 2/PAGE 2

2-281001

PLACE OF EVENT

178

Royal home to which Her Royal Highness first came at the age of six.

UP

190 187

What a tremendous morning this had been for the little Bridesmaids. For the entire Royal Family this was a day of joy they will never forget. Outside, fully a 150,000 people, with unbounded enthusiasm, acclaimed Princess Margaret and her husband when they appeared on the balcony.

202

214

UP

220

Small wonder that the enormous crowd could not be restrained by the police.

UP

240

Wonderful as many Royal appearances on this famous balcony had been in the past, very few surpassed this one.

UP

CUTTER

RECEIVED

Neg. Title Subject

LENGTHS

Ⓢ

AMOUNT

CONTENTS OF PALACE NEWS 2 No.

19

(Room) (Cutter)

(Approved) (Signature)

1014172

2-25190

two Three SECTION ONE / PAGE ONE

PLACE OF EVENT

250

At Tower Bridge lay the Royal Yacht, Britannia.

265

Leaving the Palace the ~~Royal~~ Princess and her husband drove on their way to embark. This was the beginning of surely the most romantic honeymoon of our time. ~~For the~~ 290

~~next few weeks~~ Neither the people nor the families of the newly wedded couple will see them again for a few weeks.
What a send off they had now.

UP

286

That they were late, arriving at the Pool of London, owing to a traffic jam (Mr. Marples please note?) slightly upset the time-table, but they were here at last. After saying the last goodbyes of all they <sup>beared</sup> ~~towards~~ the Barge, waiting to convey them to Britannia.

301

UP

347

~~THEY~~ Princess Margaret and Mr. Armstrong-Hones began their voyage

360 to the Caribbean at the famous starting place of innumerable voyages, from the Port of London. It was the perfect beginning of a honeymoon, as they were welcomed aboard, <sup>and</sup> that the honeymoon itself will be perfect is the wish of the whole nation.

up

This day the radiant Princess we all love became a wife, and endeared herself still further ~~to us~~ to us all.

CONTENTS OF THE NEWS

RELEASED

DATE

AMOUNT

CUTTER

NEWS

LENGTH

DATE

AMOUNT

(Room) (Cutting)

(Approved) (Signature)

1012

390

13

5-8F1901

SECTION TWO/PAGE FOUR

To her and to her husband we wish <sup>all</sup> possible happiness.

AMOUNT

③

Med. Title Subject
LENGTH

CUTLER

СУМЕРАМАН

ЕЛЕИТ

ЫҒСЕ ОҒ ЕЛЕИТ

ТОТАЛ:

Abbreviated (Басымыз)

BY

Room) (Сығым)

BY 10

REFELED

СОПТЕИТ ОҒ ЫҒНЕ ИЕМТ НО