

DUKE AT BOY'S CLUBS.

At the rebuilt Brady Boy's Club in the East End of London, the Duke was met by Sir Basil Henriques, President of the London Federation of Boys Clubs. For the Duke, and the boys and girls of the first Jewish Youth Club founded in Britain, it was a happy occasion, and the Duke showed great interest in their work.

From the Brady Club the Duke went to the Lion Boys Club, Shoreditch, where he watched the boys at work mending shoes for old people. There was time for a joke, perhaps a corny one.

Everything went on as usual, in the games room. Though the Duke was close at hand enjoying a laugh with some of the younger lads.
