

EUROPEAN CUP FINAL

Eintracht and fabulous Real Madrid (in white) took the field on a never-to-be forgotten evening at Hampden Park. Pfaff beat Zarraga in the toss, giving the Germans the choice of ends. The world's master-footballers kicked off, beginning what was to be a magical display of football. Eintracht showed their high quality when they beat Rangers, but an early escape indicated that only super football could help them this evening.

Nevertheless Eintracht were determined to give Real Madrid an early shock, if possible. Outside right Kress was the scorer.

Then Eintracht won a corner. Dominguez parried the danger.

From then, on, Real Madrid took command. The great Di Stefano levelled the score.

Another storming Madrid attack. Loy only half-saved. Di Stefano banged it home.

Next attack, the ball hit the post.

Again the ball was in the German danger zone. This time it was secured by the Hungarian Puskas. He made no mistake.

So at half-time it was Real Madrid leading 3-1. In that vast crowd, as Madrid attacked in the second half, there wasn't one of all the 130,000 who'd have taken five pounds for his place. Eintracht gallantly stuck to their well nigh hopeless task. Theoretically they were still in the game.

By now Eintracht's luck was out. Gento was pushed; penalty for Madrid.

Puskas scored from the spot. 4-1.

Now it only seemed a question of how many Real Madrid would score, though there was always the chance of an Eintracht breakaway.

Analyzed in slow motion is another Madrid goal. A good pass found the brilliant Puskas. The Hungarian marvel made it five one.

As much as the goals, it was superb Real Madrid football that entranced the crowd. Nor did they let up, despite their big lead. Here Loy had to concede a corner.

The unstoppable Puskas now got goal number six.

Eintracht almost staged a recovery. Stein beat two defenders brilliantly, to get their second goal.

What an amazing display Di Stefano did give. Perhaps no other player in the world could have scored like this. In this astounding match was just one more goal - by Eintracht Stein scored, but Real Madrid won, 7-3.
