

60/87.

DE GAULLE GETS VOTE.

President De Gaulle wound up a triumphant tour of Southern France on the eve of winning a vote of confidence in the National Assembly. Despite his failure to solve the problem of Algeria his personal popularity is as great as ever.

In the Maritime Alps, two newly wedded couples were congratulated, by the President; a meeting they'll some day describe to their grandchildren.

In Monaco the General was the luncheon guest of Prince Rainier and Princess Grace, admiring the local military before going to Nice, where he received perhaps the biggest welcome of the tour.

Sir Winston Churchill came to renew acquaintance with his old friend, both musing upon what unpredicted waters have flowed under the bridges since the world war.