

IRAN CELEBRATES BIRTH OF HEIR TO THRONE

Crowd scene in Teheran. Cause for the rush is nonpartisan tidings of great joy. Queen Farah Diba has given birth to a son and heir for Iran's throne. The long-awaited happy event, which is announced by the Queen's physician, may have future political effects -- but, right now, baby is all. At the hospital entrance, great clusters of flowers sent by the Shah's subjects wait to be admitted. Baby weighs in at eight pounds, eleven ounces. A healthy young fellow whose birth Iran has hoped for during nineteen long years!
