

NEWS OF THE DAY
VOL. 32 - 223
NOVEMBER 3, 1960

AND SO TO THE POLLS:

The campaign fever had reached the boiling point....then the American voters were making their choice of a President....and among the cameos etched in the memories of those who saw and heard the candidates was the appearance of Ike -- campaigner for the ticket of Nixon and Lodge. The grand canyon of lower Broadway was the scene..... a snowstorm of ticker tape and confetti nearly blotting out the scene. At a time when his successor in the White House would be chosen by the people, Mr. Eisenhower enjoyed one of his greatest hours of acclaim. Across the continent in California, the standard bearer of the Democratic party also marked many of the final hours before the time arrived for the electorate alone to speak. Whirlwind journeys in pursuit of votes were behind the Kennedy team. Then the tireless campaigner and his supporters waited out the counting of the ballots