In the municipal-museum at The Hague an exhibition of paintings was officially opened by the director of the museum.

Suddenly a lady wanted ^{that} a painting ~~to be removed~~, ^{a nude} ~~which~~, would be removed.

The press-photographers made several pictures of the fact that this lady herself was removed by one of the door-keepers.

Highly filled with indignation ran from the stairs and asked a constable to help her.

In the hall there was anew a discussion, after which the constable took the "nude" away.

The press-photographers made many pictures of this intervention and that is what they had to do, because all this was "mis en scene" for the final exam of the young photographers.

The lady was a well known dutch actress.

At last the exhibition was really opened but the photographers forget to "shoot" this event and so we did.
