

NAZI TANK RETURNED.

To the Army Tank Museum in Dorset it was goodbye for a German Tank. The Eighth Army captured many from Rommel in the desert, and some were brought here at the time when nobody dreamt that Germany would soon be our Allies. Now the Museum thought it would be a pleasant gesture to the Germans to let them have one of them back. To the older soldiers who saw the machine begin its journey from Bevington in the German Ambassador's presence, what memories it must have conjured up.

General Sir Richard McCreevy made the presentation. He is chairman of the Museum Trustees. The new generation of German servicemen were babes in arms when Rommel led us a rare dance in the desert. But they know he was beaten at last. Now we are rearming on the same side - what a world:
