

CHILDREN'S PARTY.

Multi-millionaire, Paul Getty pushed the boat out and welcomed to his historic Gothic home, Sutton Place, 21 children from St. Andrews Home, Reading. And there they were, large as life, sitting down in the room where Henry 8th once dined and no doubt pondered whose head to chop off next. Paul Getty wasn't worrying for the moment whether he'd got 500 millions, or only 350 as some say. He was giving a good time to youngsters who've had an unhappy start in life. Inside five minutes they were taking all this millionaire and stately home stuff in their stride, which was just how the oil king wanted it. They knew by this time that when you've made your first million, the next lot come easily.

He not only gave a swell party, he promised to give them a start in life, when the time comes. Altogether, a generous gesture.
