CAR FOILS WAGE GRABS

It's one thing to bring the wages from the bank; quite another to get the cash to the factory. Hardly a weekend goes by without the bandits getting a rich haul. So far, nobody seems to know how to stop it. Organisation, split second timing, stolen cars for the get-away, cooing if there's any resistance - the pattern's all too familiar.

Now comes the bandit proof, bullet proof car which the most daring thugs can't rob. The middle door opens in to a compartment big enough to hold £2 million in cash (rather more than the average wages bill). The guards sit in the rear compartment. As well as being bullet proof the steel casing is highly resistant to oxy-acetylene flame, in case the whole thing was somehow hi-jacked and thieves tried to burn their way in. But of course, modern things aren't easily put off. Let's see how they get on.

Neither the glass nor the steel can be pierced by even a 303 bullet.

That V sign reversed just about sums it up.
