

IRISH BACK FROM CONGO.

American Globemasters landed at Dublin Airport, bringing back to Ireland men of the gallant 9th Brigade, who've served the United Nations in the Congo. That trough of disinfectant was a precaution against foot and mouth disease.

Captain Slys had a carved ivory tusk and Baluba bow and arrows, for souvenirs.

Colonel Buckley, commanding the 32nd Battalion, was welcomed home by members of the Government and other V.I.P's. There were no immediate family reunions, but the troops were left in no doubt that their countrymen are proud of the way they carried out their thankless duties in Africa. The soldiers of Eire have earned the gratitude of all members of the United Nations, for the part they played in preventing the Congo situation from being far worse than it is.
