AUSTRALIANS ARRIVE.

Tilbury was the focal point of every cricket-lovers interest. The Aussies were there; and what visitors could be more welcome. No other English cricket seasons compare with the ones when the men from Down-Under are here, contesting the Ashes. They've come promising really bright cricket. No more of that deadly 150-runs a day stuff that kept the public away in enormous numbers. That one-time doughty foe of the Aussies, Alec Bedser, greeted Mackenzie and the others.

Neil Harvey and Colin Macdonald, Harvey, a familiar figure in England, is Vice-Captain.

Misson, Gaunt and McKensie.

Skipper Richie Benaud is insisting on more overs to the hour than have been bowled in recent years. The curse of time wasting will have to go if the game is to survive as a public attraction. Welcome indeed to the Aussies. May the Tour be one of the best ever, and may the best team win.
