DANCING CHAMPIONSHIPS.

On the floor at Hammersmith were 64-year-old Thomas Baskin and his wife, over from Los Angeles to see the World Championships. They say that English style dancing is growing in popularity in the States. Now, the professionals of 15 nations entered the competition in the modern section. Here, the waltz.

A change now to the Latin-American section.

Back to the English style, in the quick step.

Number 18: Harry Smith-Hampshire and Doreen Casey. Holders of many championships, they hoped to add the world-title to the list.

Smith-Hampshire and his pretty partner were the winners.

The Duchess of Bedford presented the cup to the new World Champions.
