NEW MISSILE STREAKS UP.

Blue Water is the latest missile operated by the Royal Artillery, always the most technical part of the British Army. It can be brought out of its concealment to the launching place, trained on to the target and fired - all without being exposed to possible enemy observation for more than ten minutes. Blue Water is a surface to surface tactical guided weapon. As it uses solid fuel it can be kept ready for firing for long periods. The range is top secret.

For its size, Blue Water is the all-round best artillery weapon evolved so far.
