

WHITSUN PROCESSION

The Procession of Witness was held in Manchester, as it has been in that great city for 160 years. After an early morning service in Albert Square, several hundred Sunday-school children marched first to the Cathedral and then back to their parishes. All the Anglican Churches with Sunday Schools were represented. In this way the children devoted part of Whit Monday to proclaiming the Faith.

Sunday school attendance isn't the more or less compulsory matter that it was in the early years of the 19th century, when the first Procession of Whitness took place, so it's much to the credit of Manchester that in this day and age so many children enjoyed taking part.

The Church of England in Manchester congratulates itself on the success of the procession.
