TRAPPED BOY RESCUED:

In a 7-inch gap between two houses a little boy of 2-and-a-half was trapped. The fire brigade was summoned after all other attempts to get him out had failed. A hole through a kitchen wall was the only way to reach him. Lex's mother was in hospital having a baby; so, mercifully, she knew nothing about it. They told the little chap they'd soon have him out, but he was sobbing and didn't understand.

Lex could be seen at last, two hours after the first alarm. Now it was only a matter of minutes before his ordeal would be over. And thank goodness he wasn't seriously hurt. Rescued in time, the baby boy would soon recover from the shock.
