

CINESOUND REVIEW

LITTLE BOY

IS STREET Firemen were called when a two and a half year old boy became trapped in the seven inch gap between two houses.

ON ROOF Rescuers look down into the cavity to find HIM and to direct helpers who frantically dig bricks and mortar from the wall to free the youngster. The boy, was sobbing pitifully,

ON ROOF As fire officers above tried to comfort him.

Police and firemen gradually removed part of the wall, but young Lex had been trapped for an hour and a half before the alarm was given and he was finally freed. His mother was in hospital, where she had given birth to another child.

But now, through a hole in the kitchen wall, Lex was free again...
A real-life drama of a trapped baby boy, rescued in the nick of time!