

BOYS BRIGADE OLYMPIC STARS ?

Beautiful Lilleshall Hall, nowadays the training college of top class athletes to be, was the home for one week of 450 senior members of the Boys Brigade. They were getting instruction from the country's leading coaches in a variety of sports and games. Each boy paid £6 - wonderful value for a great week. One of the most popular courses was in Archery. Somebody once said that if there's a nuclear war, the war after that will be fought with bows and arrows.

There's fine instruction in cricket. The MCC should have sent a team here before the Test series.

A good deal was picked up at the tennis school. Maybe a future Wimbledon champion may emerge as the result.

And who knows if there's another Peter Radford among this bunch?

Rugby and Soccer had most of them interested.

Wet outside? Try Badminton, a game that more and more take up every year.

Then there's Judo. Useful if some other chap takes a fancy to your girlfriend.

Of course, all this activity makes them very hungry.

And what lovely grub!

Useful instruction for married life, washing-up.

After a week of all this, the boy'll be fit for anything. And they'll certainly go home with the happiest memories of the finest holiday they've ever had, a week at Lilleshall.
