

FASHIONS FOR ALL

Why don't men go all out to be really glamorous. At night, try a painted silk dressing gown. Underneath, irresistible Baby Doll pyjamas.

The audience at the Dorchester saw suggestions for golf. Nowadays our men play in any old thing, leaving the Plus Twos and co-respondent's shoes to the Yanks.

A silk jacket and slim-line slacks with iridescent effect would be terrific - say in a football crowd. Evidently there's no reason why men should go on being drab.

It's easy to relax and be smart at the same time. A television dressing gown and jacket and fez, just the thing for learning about all those detergents and delicious shampoos.

And how about a spot of glamour in footwear? It's time that both sexes tried out something new. Exhibitors at the London Shoe Week show at the Mount Royal Hotel had some ideas that took the eye, whatever else might be said.

Will it ever come to one light shoe and one dark? Once we get away from our slavery to the conventional, there's no knowing what might happen.

Why not gamble on something topical? Bingo: Next time you buy shoes you'll have quite a choice.
