

YOUR FURS FOR WINTER.

Three fur-clad girls, crossing the park in the autumn sunshine made a picture which a young artist tried to capture. But, of course, the main attraction was inside the Dorchester, where the National Fur Company displayed to a fascinated audience creations available this season. A leopard coat with a collar of ranch mink had many mouths watering. The price - £950.

A coat of Sapphire mink, also in the "medium" price range. The husband has to be a pretty good provider, all the same. And still concentrating on mink, the eye was taken by a pastel wrap - at £435.

On the left, a three-quarter coat of Berbera Kidakin. The one on the right, is also of Berbera. A beige Indian Broadtail coat, with mink collar.

A lovely effect at a comparatively small cost: a stole of white Artic Fox.

Black and white Syrian Kidakin is chosen here for both the coat and hat, and costing just less than £100. But now, raise your eyebrows - a Tourmaline Mink at nearly £3,600. Happiness for a lucky woman.
