

FIREMEN'S "OLYMPICS"

Moscow firemen in their annual display made it clear that to be a member of a top Russian fire brigade a man has to be a trained-to-the-minute athlete.

They have an aim that would win prizes at Bisley. But that's nothing. They can run out a length of hose as fast as crack runners can do the four-forty.

The main event on the programme demands an ability to scale walls that seems more than human.

The trophy went to Moscow Central Fire Brigade. Our pictures don't show any actual fire fighting. But the Brigade's hot stuff.
