

CAMPING EXHIBITION

It's no sooner New Year than everybody makes holiday plans, and the Camping and Outdoor Life Exhibition just teems with suggestions. The Aeroform Hall, inflated where-ever you want it, gives complete weather protection. Even if it's snowing in the open it can be tropical inside - just the thing for the English summer. The secret of the warmth is the hot air pump.

Jack Train was so impressed they could hardly stop him getting in. It's surprising that some people go camping without a thought for the comfort of their animals. No excuse from now on.

You can learn spinning at the Exhibition, and so save making a fool of yourself the first time you try it outside. Also, the first steps to that great sport, underwater fishing.

The discovery of a whole new world is made possible by the aqualung.

Rock climbing, the easy way. No danger, but enough to whet the appetite of any worth-while boy to have a shot at the real thing when the time comes.

Parachute landing. Learn what it's like to come to earth from a few thousand feet. By the way, camping nowadays needn't keep you in Britain. Soon, try the Moon. Girls, there's a man up their with quite a twinkle in his eye.
