

ARTISTS IN HAIR STYLES

Britain's top hairdressers invited four European masters to join in a demonstration of the art. With the Common Market round the corner they felt that the profession should be in close touch with the Continent. Xavier, of Knightsbridge, and Allan Johnson, Birmingham, have the international touch already. From Solihull, Peter Webb, creating "Fantasy". All these styles are of course for the big occasion, when a woman simply must look her striking best. And if the top artists of the business have their way, woman's crowning glory will soon be taking up most of her spare time.

Shirley Breakwell proves that women can invade the top of the profession.

Under the Common Market there's no reason why the Continental fashion should be reserved for top women's top-knots. Why shouldn't husbands pop over to Paris for a haircut - and all that.
