

KENYA'S FUTURE ?

Lancaster House has staged many Colonial conferences, but this was the first one with picturesque touches. Head-dresses with lion's mane cloaks indicate the importance of the tribal leaders. The conference discussed the future of Kenya. Jomo Kenyatta, perhaps the outstanding African in his country, desires a central government. Mr. Ngala, his chief opponent prefers a federation of regions, not dominated by the Kikuyu tribe. The present Governor is Sir Patrick Renison. Colonial Secretary Reginald Maulding hopes for a Constitution that will guarantee "equality before an impartial law", as well as freedom from fear and oppression.