

NEW INDOOR TRACK

No doubt about it, Wembley's indoor track's a winner. Here's the women's four-forty; Maevé Kyle in the lead.

Maevé Kyle was never seriously challenged. She held her commanding lead over Miss Dunbar, and in 58.3 seconds was a good winner.

Houvicn, France, using the fibre-glass pole. Whether this type of pole will rank for outdoor records is doubtful. The 60-yard-dash. Paul Winder nearest camera. He won in six-point-4 seconds. They must have gone clean through the back wall.

The Women's 60-yard hurdles.

Betty Moore, of Salford Athletic, won in 8 seconds.

Top of the bill item - the men's three miles. 36 laps. This track, provided by the Daily Herald, means top-class athletics all the year round. For future Olympic stars and runners like Derek Ibbotson (Number 19) it's a boon. He's already won the 2-mile.

A lap and a half from the finish Ibbotson went like a 100-yard sprinter.

Achieving a European indoor record Ibbotson lapped the tail-enders and won in 13 minutes, 44.8. A great comeback for a wonderful runner.
