

BOYS FOOTBALL INTERNATIONAL.

The Junior Leaders Regiment, Royal Artillery, contributed to the entertainment at Wembley. Then a salute of 21 guns.

Frank Barlow spun the coin. Detlef Kemena guessed correctly, so the Germans had choice of end, and the schoolboys' International was under way. England in white shirts. There was almost a Cup Final atmosphere, but with the difference that 95,000 schoolboys packed the ground, but supporters of Spurs and Burnley. We shall be showing the real Final in a few days time, in colour. England had the better of the opening stages. After 12 minutes, Michael Bullock scored.

Right on the goal-line. A German boy kicked clear; narrow escape for them.

Germany equalised before half time. From a difficult angle Korsikowski banged it home.

England tried hard to get ahead, but the German defence held fast.

Half time, one all. And after the interval, England attacked hard, but it was the same story; the finishing wasn't good enough.

Five minutes after the resumption Korsikowsky passed to Bechtold. He scored.

England did everything to draw level except put the ball in the net.

The visitors' defence never faltered, so a fine match was won by Germany, two-one.
