

HAIR STYLES CHAMPIONS

There are other World Cups besides the football one. The Fellowship of Hair Artists (that sounds something, doesn't it?) held the Open British Championship at Sutton Coldfield, showing how much can be made of a girl's hair when the maestros really let themselves go. A team of five will represent Britain at Amsterdam, competing for the World Title. As 20 other countries will be in the running nobody's going to have a walkover. The styles are essentially for dressy occasions; not for battling your way in the rush hour.

Peter Webb, of Solihull, won the competition, and received the trophy from the Fellowship President. Peter has been in two previous world cup teams, and won the Northern European Championship a few years ago. Perhaps he's destined for still higher honours.
