

'COPTER DOCTORS

Here's a German idea that's one up on the ambulance - even the flying ambulance. It's the clincopter, a fully-equipped airborne operating theatre. In an emergency, when it's too late or too dangerous to move a patient to hospital, the Clincopter and its team of doctors and surgeons can be flown to the spot, and be ready to operate the moment the patient arrives.

The most transportable operating theatre in the world, it should save many lives in multiple accidents - because as casualties are dealt with, the helicopters can be moving them on to hospital for post-operational care, while the theatre team stay on the ground and keep working.
