SCOTLAND V. ENGLAND

The International soccer match at Hampden Park, Glasgow, turned out a sorry day for the Scotsmen, in dark shirts, and white pants. Any hopes the Scots team had of holding the English forward line were shattered in the later stages of the game. The first half was evenly balanced, but Scotland's luck was out. They had to call in a substitute for Bogan, their inside right, injured after only two minutes play. Each side had a goal disallowed for offside. The crowd of 135,000 gave plenty of samples of the famous Hampden rear.

Scotland's goal went down well among the massed home supporters.

In the second half England piled on the pressure. The goal-thirsty English forwards had a field day.

Incessant attacks had the Scottish defence worried most of the time. On England's showing in this game, they have built up an excellent combination working together with something like the precision of pre-war Internationals. Defeat became a rout towards the end. England heaped up the goals to win 6 - 1.
