AUSTRALIANS IN SINGAPORE.

For the second time in history, the diggers are winning immortal glory in the battlefields of the Middle East. From every corner of Australia they come, stout hearted men from bush and city giving their all freely and unstintingly. Singapore, Britain's strong point in the East, and gateway to the Orient leaps into the news again, as thousands of Australian troops arrive to augment the Garrison in the Colony. Commanded by Brigadier-General Bennett, seen here on the left, their arrival caused a world sensation. A Kangaroo mascot came along too when the largest body of men ever to arrive in Malaya in a single convoy, came to guard Britain's huge Naval Base against a new menace.
