JUMPING FOR JOY

On America's Olympic Jump the masters of the art of skiing are fighting it out for the Dunne Trophy. As the experts streak down the long slide we film them in leaps that reveal the secret of successful jumping. Slow motion shows you the form necessary in top flight competition. The skis are kept parallel and close together with the toes up. The jumpers must lean forward, using their arms to maintain balance. Now Paul J. Tiller, 18 year old student from the University of Wisconsin shows perfect form in the winning jump. 202 feet, well done Paul, remember your name rhymes with fall. O.K. he heard.
