GALLANT FINLAND.

Little Finland is the dreamland of Christmas, with snow, with reindeers, and with sledges. But look at Finland's Christmas this year... after the huge Russian Bombers have blasted away at Viborg. The ice is thick on the telegraph wires... the arctic wind howls across the snowy wastes. In such a war one of the important weapons is hot soup for the troops and here it comes.

But in spite of the extreme cold, the anger of stolid stubborn Finland, sends every able bodied man to the front to find the nearest Russian soldier. So they put on their white coats and wax their skis. And after a month of war the Russian Bear is not only stopped... but finds himself retreating before an almost invisible army. Today Little Finland is putting up such a savage defence, as the modern world has rarely seen. Against all the might of the Soviet, Finland fights on.

And still later pictures from Finland... of the white war among the snows. Russian guns that have been captured. And some of the Russians run away so fast, they even left their trousers behind.

On the Southern battlefield on the Karelian Isthmus, the Finns are entrenched in their Mannerheim Line.... and all the might of Russian Tanks and Artillery can't break through. But its hardest of all to keep warm. In the far North, at Petsamo on the Arctic Ocean, the Ghost Army in the mist. They're driving Russia back, they've got the enemy on the run, and in latest reports they've crossed the border, and are harrying the bear on his own ground. While all the democratic world drinks a toast to Gallant Finland.
