FRENCH NAVY ENFORCES BLOCKADE.

The Navy of France is playing an increasingly important part in the War at sea. Across the troubled oceans of the world.... French Cruisers.... Destroyers<sup>1</sup> and armed patrol vessels.... are ploughing their way through the rolling seas and winter. At every point there's complete co-operation with the Royal Navy.... in tightening the stranglehold on the seaborne trade of Germany. A neutral vessel has been sighted by one of the French Patrol Boats. Her commander is informed and climbs to the Bridge.... to inspect the distant ship. He decides that she may be carrying goods destined for Germany. He signals to her to heave to.

Through a megaphone the Neutral Captain is instructed to stand by for an inspection of his cargo.

The French commander decides that the neutral ship is carrying contraband of war. He orders her to change her course, and steam towards a French Harbour. There her contraband cargo is unloaded. A few thousand more tons of the spoils of war for the Allies. Another nail in the coffin of Nazidom.... The war at sea is hard.....a war of ambush and swooping attacks out of the Mist.

But sea power may well be the deciding factor in the final struggle. And France plays her part in making the sea power of the Allies invincible.
