WHEN WINTER CAME!

During last month one of the heaviest snowfalls in living memory visited the country, a positive joyride for motorists (if they didn't mind getting out to push).

The snow piled up everywhere, and in parts, the railway line didn't matter ~~any~~ more. But the troops soon helped... to make some sweeping changes.

The "Road blocked" Notice, hardly seemed necessary, as most of the houses were up to their necks - the bedrooms, anyway.

(And you could easily rise to the occasion, even to the level of the roof.

Some dwellings were snow^d up for three days, and the occupants couldn't get out. But it's an ill snowfall that doesn't bring somebody some good. Mister Brown, of course, always did this sort of thing in Switzerland.
