War Drama off Cape Coast.

The WATUSSI, a German liner, well known on the African route before the war, has gone the way of most Nazi vessels, seeking to avoid contact with British forces.... Called upon by a reconnaissance squadron of the South African Air Force, the crew (as one expects these days) scuttled the ship. Also, as one expects, all on board were rescued. They're on their way to an internment camp in Pretoria, but it doesn't seem to depress them very much. ~~Simplex~~ They know they're going to get plenty to eat (and no ration cards) for the duration.

This woman's baby was born after she was rescued from one of the boats, she, and her baby, will be well cared for.

It was fear of these men of the Union Air Force, which brought about the WATUSSI's dive to Davy Jones' locker! They're a fine looking lot of fellows . . well on their toes for any ugliness, any misguided Nazis may try to introduce into South Africa.
