AUSTRALIA ANSWERS THE CALL.

You have seen pictures, of Australians arriving in the Middle East, but these are the first films to be released of the Diggers goodbye to their homeland... Obviously, it would have been unwise to show them, while ships with such valuable cargo were on their way.

They cling everywhere, these soldiers, eager for a last look at those they leave behind... Not a word has been printed or spoken, about their departure. But there's a small crowd there, to join in Auld Lang Syne.

Propellers are turning - - and the voyage is on. Memories of 1914-1918 crowd in upon us, as we see these grey monsters, moving away from the quays, with thousands of men following in the footsteps of their fathers (the fighting men of Gallipoli) Palestine and France) Today in far distant lands, the Diggers are marching, ... the Southern Cross is flying. With them, go the hopes, the prayers of the Commonwealth, that glorious in the spirit of Anzac.
