THEIR MAJESTIES INSPECT AMBULANCES.

In the grounds of Buckingham Palace, the first section of the Anglo-French Ambulance Corps is drawn up for inspection, by the King and Queen. The Ambulances come from all parts of the Empire.....and are manned by men over military age.... who are determined not to be left out of this war. The King's inspection is thorough, nor is that of the Queen in any degree less so. She wants to see all there is to see.... The new Corps is honoured, and will remember today for a very long time.
