

GIRL STUDENT'S SKIING IN ITALY

A hundred girl students from Manitoba University in the Italian Alps are taking part in the annual skiing competitions and a happy group of smiling chatterboxes goes up the mountainside to the skiing grounds. All the competitors are numbered. Before the fun begins there's the formality of photographs. The day's a great day in the history of the school so there must be a film record. The first girl goes down to a grand alide and there's not the slightest hint of a tumble as she streaks along the course. The others follow in quick succession, each trying to put up a more graceful show than the last. The referees and timekeepers very much on the alert. A spill, but only for a moment, with great presence of mind she picks herself up and carries on - good for you Signorina. Next on the list is the Slalom race and with amazing skill the competitors weave in and out among the flags. And the winner's number five. Up the school.
