

THE QUEEN ELIZABETH IN NEW YORK.

Eighteen months ago Queen Elizabeth gave her name to the largest of all ocean liners, with words of sincere hope.

At that time you'll remember, we were experiencing all the trials of an earlier crisis, culminating in the Munich Agreement.

And now we see the mighty Queen Elizabeth near the end of her maiden voyage. She sailed under sealed orders, without the usual cheery send off... accorded a big ship as she puts to sea. Nor is her welcome, any more boisterous, for New Yorkers are caught by surprise. They had no idea that so important a visitor was due, until she nosed into her berth alongside her sister ship QUEEN MARY.

The end of a thrilling war time voyage. But Captain Towley is not saying anything, A grand effort of British seamanship .... all honour, to those responsible.
