GENERAL GAMELIN WITH THE ARMY IN BRITAIN.

The Commander in Chief of the Allied Forces is on a visit to Britain... for a meeting of the supreme War Council. So he takes the opportunity of seeing something of our Army in training.... and of meeting Officers and men of the French Canadians. Here surely is an amazing symbol of the unity of the Allied War effort. These men have come across the Atlantic from the new world.... they are citizens of the Empire, yet they speak the French language. They will go into battle.... be commanded by a Frenchman....the man who honours them today.... in their own language.
