KING AND QUEEN AT ALDERSHOT.

His Majesty pays his first War time visit to a unit that is training young officer cadets.

The average age of these young men is twenty five, and while the King is with them, classes go on as usual¹

One gun crew is training with an eighteen pounder, and they're pretty smart.

Meanwhile the Queen is taking the salute, at the march past of the Toronto Scottish, of which Her Majesty is Colonel in Chief.

And then the Canadian Light Infantry, in battle dress.
