

5-258500
30

SALVAGED AFTER TWENTY THREE YEARS.

The crew of the famous salvage ship the ANTIGLIO are at work again. The world still remembers how they recovered millions in gold from the sunken liner EGYPT. Now once again they're using dynamite on the bottom of the sea.

These tough Italian seamen, are acknowledged experts of deep sea diving. This time they're after the remains of the REGINA MARGHERITA, sunk on the Albanian coast twenty three years ago. The diver comes up from the seabed, to report that the dynamite has done its work, and the huge electric magnet brings up piece by piece the remains of the sunken ship.

This time it isn't gold they're after, but ordinary scrap iron and steel, which war has made almost as valuable as the precious metal.