BIG FIRE IN NEW JERSEY.

Sheets of vivid flame shoot skywards, rolling up huge clouds of dense smoke, that black out the country side for over a dozen miles.

A mighty chemical works is ablaze, after an explosion. The smoke is borne Eastwards on the wind, and even hangs over New York, nine miles away.

And to get these amazing shots, our cameraman flies into the acrid fumes.

And on the ground another cameraman risks a scorching to make this record of firemen battling with destruction.

Through the late afternoon, and into the night, the firemen fight on.....and when the damage is reckoned, it totals nearly a million dollars.
