THEIR MAJESTIES SEE FOR THEMSELVES.

Once again Britain's war effort receives the honour of a Royal inspection. In South Lancashire Their Majesties visit one of the great aircraft factories. The King is amazed when he is told the monthly production figure from this Factory alone. Of course that is a secret. But above all, the King and Queen are impressed by the determination and loyalty of the employees.

At a Barracks in the King's Own Duchy of Lancaster, he reviews seven hundred men on parade.

Meanwhile, the Queen inspects three hundred A.T.S. Girls. And Her Majesty can hardly believe it when told that some of these smart youngsters have only been in training for a week.

Finally, at another factory, Their Majesties see one of Britain's latest anti-aircraft guns.

And Lancashire gives the King and Queen a great send off.
