

FRENCH TROOPS FROM NORWAY.

Welcome arrivals at a Northern British Port, are the famous Alpine Chausiers of France. Small strong mountaineers. They too have retired from the Central Norwegian front, with their British comrades. Generals Littlehauser and Audet of France are here to welcome them, with General Sir Edmund Ironside. Many of the French troops were surprised at their recall, at the moment when they were ready to launch the first attack on the enemy.

But as General Mittelhauser points out to them... they were the advance guard, and its the duty of an advance guard to make contact with the enemy... or to break their contact, as ordered by the high command.

So for a time the Frenchman are welcomed visitors to Britain. And we hope they do not break too many hearts.