

ALLIES COUNTER ATTACK.

General Weygand's first order... is to bring out some of France's heaviest artillery for a counter attack on the enemy positions. These are French Hundred and Ninety fours.... 8 inch guns that can be moved across country... that fire a barrage from one position, then move again, to prevent the enemy spotting them. The destruction of their shells, falls on the enemy positions, always from a different angle. There is less chance of Jerry's bringing his guns or planes to bear on the French Artillery. their continuous movement leaves the enemy guessing. And now they are ready for the next bombardment, the shells are swung into the breach, and the guns speak again.

And slow motion brings you the thunderous power of this mighty armament of France.

In slow motion again. And this time if you watch carefully above the flash...you can see the shell.

France is in danger... and she fights back.
