

BUSINESS AS USUAL.

An interfering Nazi raider made a local Inn "all untidy".
Altogether several bombs were dropped; only one did its best to turn the inside of the Inn outside.

Perhaps Jerry heard that our tea is rationed, and tried to deprive the locals of their beer too! But, bearing in mind Mr. Duff Cooper's suggestion, the villagers decide to keep selling, and carry on as usual.

Thank goodness the old dashboard "stayed round". So one can still get a "double" occasionally, while the landlord takes a delight in "whaling up the scores".

The landlord's family were smart, so they keep their spirits, while they sell their beer! As the eldest inhabitant said - "While there's life, there's 'ope."
