A woman's work is never done, but all the same he's a great comfort to her - and talking of comfort, the children from the Council Houses in Byker, Newcastle on Tyne are running a "Variety Show" to supply comforts for the troops. The tops of Anderson Shetlers provide the gallery and the "ladies of the Chorus" step it out on a strip of carpet. A feature of the Bill is a variety turn from a solo artist who gives it all she's got.... and it looks as if she's got plenty. A turn from two other little girls also gets a big hand, and the orchestra's all wound up, while the hat goes round for the collection.

Taking in the reserved seat bookings, that makes 10/2 $\frac{1}{2}$ for the troops, from the first house too! Nice going.

WEDDING

LONDONSt. John's Westminster is the scene of the wedding of Mr. J. Henderson Stewart M.P., and Miss Anna Greenwell.

The bridegroom once said in a Parliamentary debate that he would never marry unless he met a girl equal to his mother. He met Sir Peter Greenwell's sister, and that started something: but Mums still the word!

Veteran Car Rally.

Having paid the final instalment on their cars, several Smith Australian Veteran Motorists enter their pre-flood models in a rally. Aunt Jessie, flinging aside all decorum, swings into action. Tyre trouble? Try our repair system - it cuts tyre repair bills in half.

Trouble with these girls is, they refuse to walk home. Yes, it's a flash back to the fast life of the dear old days, when our papa's wore moustaches like handlebars, and the ladies fumbled for their smelling salts when a mile stone flashed by every fifteen minutes. But at any rate there was plenty of exercise in motoring in those days, and after plenty of "push" there was enough "go" to send ~~them~~ them round corners in a mad swirl of speed, spraying all and sundry with a nice coating of dust. Camouflaging Cars.

But in these days, when mud slinging is the pastime of dictators, we find it necessary to spray the cars so that (from the air) they just don't exist.

The Ministry of Home Security has power to order the camouflaging of all cars.... but has not yet applied it to civilian cars. So that's another black mark we can add to the despoiler of our motoring pleasures. Even its owner wouldn't recognise it now - looks a perfect stranger.

Baby Bison.

And talking of strangers, Mrs. Bison has presented the London Zoo with a little stranger. This young man who is only 24 hours old, appears to want to take life easily. But mother has different ideas.
