

5-251300
40/61

THE KING AT A NAVAL BASE.

The King spends another busy day visiting a Naval Base, and inspecting detachments of the Allied Navies who threw in their lot with the British Fleet when their countries were invaded. But as he leaves, the same great cheer does for them all.

His Majesty walks through the Dockyard to the Naval Barracks, and during an air raid alarm, steps quite unperturbed into a shelter.

His tour includes a visit to the Fleet Air Arm, and a chat with some of the men. An inspiring example of the Allied spirit of "Go to it".